German Chancellor Thinks Turn on Powerful Russia Was Hinted.

NEUTRALS' COMMERCE STRANGLED, HE SAYS

Berlin Never Has Aspired to European Hegemony, High Official Tells Reichstag.

BERLIN, August 20, by wireless to Sayville, N. Y .- Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German imperial chancellor, in a speech at the opening of the reichstag after a recess since May 30, retraced the history of the European events leading up to the pres-

He unveiled what he said were atparliaments, and he said it showed that up to the present the complete truth was hidden and forbidden in the entente allied countries.

Makes Sensational Charge.

The chancellor in a sensational statement quoted the words which he declared Sir Edward Grey spoke to the German ambassador to London, when the latter took leave of the British foreign minister after the beginning of the war, in August, 1914.

"Sir Edward Grey," said the chancel-lor, "emphasizing his words, said that war between the two countries would make it possible that at the conclusion of peace he could render us more val-uable services than had England remained neutral."
The chancellor explained that he interpreted these words to mean that England desired the friendship of a beaten and weakened Germany as a counter in-fluence against powerful Russia. Eng-land would be ready to use such a Gery-a weak country without industry without a navy.

Arraigns British Pretense.

The chancellor arraigned what he declared was the English pretense that Great Britain was fighting in the interests of small neutral countries.

"The legitimate commerce of neutral by England, who forbids neutrals to cause this is convenient for the liberty of the military operations of herself and her allies. She tries, together with her allies, to force neutral Greece to the relief concede territory to Bulgaria because thus she desires to engage the latter

Calls Accusation Hypocrisy.

The chancellor summed up this phase of his speech in these words: "A country whose policy was and is such, has no right to accuse of warlust or barbarism or of a desire for conquest a country that protected European peace for forty-four years; a country that only lived for peaceful evolution, while others went to war and conquered other countries: a coun-try that now, menaced by half of the world, fights for its own life. Such an accusation is hypocrisy.' Attack Long Planned, Is Claimed.

Commenting on the recently published documents declared to be secret reports of Belgian diplomats, the chancellor declared they proved that Germany had been attacked after long and careful preparation by others for war. He reviewed an attempt to arrive at an un-derstanding with England after the Moroccan crisis, stating that England had declined Germany's suggestion for tacks, and, therefore, I thought that a promise to abstain from such attacks, or refrain from entering combinations which plan such attacks, could not wel be the object of a solemn treaty be-tween civilized nations." The chancellor said he had thereupon suggested: "England, therefore, will obviously observe benevolent neutral-ity should war be forced upon Ger-

England Flatly Refuses.

This, he said, England flatly rejected, fearing that it "would have endangered her friendship with other nations." This fact, the chancellor added, had never yet been communicated to the English nation.

Premier Asquith in his speech at Cardiff October 2, 1914, the chancellor added, said he had scouted the last German suggestion, representing that Germany had asked England to remain neutral in the event of Germany being engaged in war. This version of the request was untrue, the chancellor de-clared. Not if "engaged in war," he said, but "if war was forced upon Germany," was what Germany asked. The chancellor expressed astonishment that Premier Asquith, who he characterized as an able statesman, was unable to this difference "Who has spread and invented fairy tales?" asked the chancellor in commenting on the Cardiff speech.

Alliance Transformed.

A short time afterward, the chancealing the fact from the English pub-

Germany was not simply opposed to the British suggestion for an inter-national conference, but that she sub-stituted a suggestion for a quieter form of working by direct conversa-tions with Vienna and St. Petersburg.

Mediation Advised.

The speaker affirmed that Germany advised Austria-Hungary to accept mediation in a form which as he had previously said, "went as far as was barely compatible with the alliance."

The chancellor then made the following important statement regarding Poland's future:
"Geographical and political fate has forced Germans and Poles to fight against each other for centuries. Remembrance of this old antagonism has now diminished. I do not imitate the glittering promises of our enemies, but I hope that the present occupation of hope that the present occupation of he eastern Polish frontier means the beginning of a new evolution which will abolish the old-time antagonism between Germans and Poles, and lead Poland, freed from the Russian yoke, toward a brighter future, in which she will be able to develop and cultivate her individual national character."

Will Free Balkans, He Says.

The chancellor continued "Further German and Austrian victories will free the Balkan nations from Russian oppression and make possible a realization of the principle of the Balkans for the Balkan nations." The chancellor concluded:

"Germany has never aspired to a European hegemony. Her ambition was to excel others in the works of civilization amid the peaceful competition of large and small nations. This war has brought to light the greatness of the attainments made possible by our tempts made by the enemies of Germany to conceal the whole truth from the nations at large and from their own people. This, he said, was proved by the incompleteness of the information given by the diplomatists of the contente allied countries to their own parliaments, and he said it showed is free for a new Europe, delivered from French intrigues, Muscovite lust of conquest and British tutelage."

Are Reported Never More Plentiful Than They Are for This

Peaches and pears are offered very freely in the market; indeed, there was never such a profusion of the fruit, and record low prices for this season of the year are prevailing. This is also true of many other fruits and vegetables, and the housewives are taking advantage of this cheapness in the markets to lay in large supplies for canning and preserving for winter

While fruits and vegetables are plencountries," he said, "has been strangled tiful and cheap, hens are falling down on their jobs and there has been, the transport merchandise coming from or going to Germany, even if the merchandise is not contraband.
